

The average guest will spend almost $3,000 per wedding this year, Affirm consumer spend report reveals

April 26, 2022

More than a third of wedding-goers will attend a sequel wedding in 2022; Nearly two-thirds agree they would spend more money on a destination wedding if they can make a vacation out of it

SAN FRANCISCO – April 26, 2022 – The average American will be invited to four weddings this year and nearly a third (28%) of Americans are planning one of their own, making 2022 a true comeback year for weddings, according to the latest Affirm Consumer Spending Report.

New research from Affirm found that over a third (35%) of those who have been invited to a wedding will attend a sequel wedding – a second ceremony planned by a couple after their first scaled down pandemic wedding. Over half (56%) of consumers surveyed agree that more couples are having sequel weddings in 2022 so their friends and family can attend festivities in person.

The return of travel is also a reality for many wedding-goers — about one in three Americans are expecting to take a trip for a wedding this year and the majority (59%) are willing to spend more to travel to a wedding if they can make a vacation out of it.

As the costs of attendance can add up quickly - from gifts to clothing to travel - nearly two-thirds (63%) of invited guests this year report feeling financially stressed. Over a third (37%) claim they've been unable to buy a gift for a couple or purchase a new outfit for a wedding, due to financial constraints. To help cope with the financial burden and take control of their wallet, almost a third (28%) plan to use a pay-over-time solution like Affirm.

"One in four Americans plans to spend more on wedding attendance this year than ever before. In fact, the average consumer could spend up to $12,000 attending weddings in 2022 alone," said Silvija Martincevic, Chief Commercial Officer at Affirm. "As the financial burden of attending weddings increases, paying over time can help consumers fit everything from flights to attire into their budget. With Affirm, consumers can responsibly navigate the wedding season, spreading out their payments with the peace of mind that there are no hidden fees, ever."

Additional key findings include:

- 1 in 2 (51%) agree that couples should invoice wedding guests the cost of their attendance if they no-show
- More than a third (36%) of consumers say they've had to decline being in a wedding party due to high costs
- Almost half (46%) of consumers agree that guests should buy an additional gift when attending a second ceremony, even if they already purchased an initial gift for the couple.
